

Critical Gerontology for Social Workers

Edited by Sandra Torres, Uppsala University and Sarah Donnelly, University College Dublin

"This collection represents an outstanding contribution to the debate on the future of social work with older people. A timely and important book, drawing together some of the most influential writers and researchers in the field."
Chris Phillipson, The University of Manchester

"This group of leading academics have combined to produce a truly international case for the vital contribution of critical gerontology to the skilful practice of gerontological social work."
Sally Richards, Oxford Brookes University

This original collection explores how critical gerontology can make sense of old age inequalities to inform social work research, policy and practice. Engaging with key debates on age-related human rights, the conceptual focus addresses the current challenges and opportunities facing those who work with older people.
